

Please share your opinions with young people from the global-good project Imagining the Internet at IGF 2017 in Geneva, Switzerland

You are invited to visit briefly with a team of young people from the non-profit, civil society organization the Imagining the Internet Center who are asking IGF participants to share their thoughts about the Internet in brief video interviews.

Imagining the Internet is a Webby Honors-winning, non-profit, civil society project. We ask people to share their views in order to expose issues and potential impacts, to inform policy, and to create a public record that tells the story of the Internet's evolution.

You will be asked these questions:

Who are you? (Your name; work title/affiliation; your home country; your IGF stakeholder group.)

- 1) The Key Internet Issue Today? What is the most important Internet issue today - what challenge, or fear is most important to address now to assure the best future?
- 2) Will There Be More Regulation? – Yes or no: Will the Internet become much more regulated in the next 10 years? Why? What are negatives and positives of regulation?]
- 3) Standards for Security and Ethics? Yes or no: In the next 10 years, will there be some commonly accepted global guidelines for security and ethics for the Internet of Things, Big Data and artificial intelligence? Why? OR Why not?
- 4) Do Multistakeholder Forums Work? Yes or no: Do multistakeholder efforts like IGF have any impact on the processes they are created to positively influence? If not, why? OR If so, what and how?
- 5) What Is the Future of the Internet? In just one word or a brief phrase – in 5 seconds or less – describe the Internet's future.

The interviews will be posted online soon at <http://www.imaginingtheinternet.org> and at <https://www.youtube.com/user/ImaginingtheInternet> under a Creative Commons Attribution 3.0 license. Leaders of the on-site interview team are Dr. Dave Bockino dbockino@elon.edu, a professor at Elon University, and Melissa Douglas, mdouglas5@elon.edu, a video producer at Elon. The director of Imagining the Internet is Professor Janna Anderson of Elon: andersj@elon.edu.
