Participant Biographies for Fall 2010 Symposium

Transparency, Secrecy, and the Internet:
Striking a Balance Between the Ideals of Privacy and Accountability in the Digital Age

Friday, October 29, 2010

Adam Candeub, Acting Director of the Intellectual Property & Communications Law Program and Associate Professor of Law, Michigan State University College of Law. Candeub has served as an attorney-advisor for the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) in the Media Bureau and Common Carrier Bureau, Competitive Pricing Division. From 1998 to 2000, Candeub was a litigation associate for the Washington D.C. firm of Jones, Day, Reavis & Pogue, in the issues and appeals practice. He also has served as a corporate associate with Cleary, Gottlieb, Steen & Hamilton, also in Washington, D.C. Immediately following law school, he clerked for Chief Judge J. Clifford Wallace, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit. Candeub's scholarly interests focus on the intersection of regulation, economics, and communications law and policy.

Andrew Chin, Associate Professor of Law, University of North Carolina School of Law. Chin earned his doctorate studying combinatorial mathematics and computational complexity theory at St. Catherine's College, Oxford. Between 1991 and 1995, he taught mathematics at Texas A&M University, computer science at King's College, University of London, and public policy at the University of Texas at Austin. After graduation from Yale Law School, he clerked for Judge Henry H. Kennedy, Jr. of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia, and assisted Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson and his law clerks in the drafting of the findings of fact in United States v. Microsoft Corporation. He has practiced with Skadden, Arps, Slate, Meagher & Flom, LLP., and is of counsel to Intellectual Property Solutions, P.L.L.C., where he prepares and prosecutes patent applications in computer and Internet technology.

Shubha Ghosh, Professor of Law, University of Wisconsin School of Law. Ghosh has taught in the fields of intellectual property, business organizations, tort law, antitrust, property, and law & economics since fall 1996. He is the author of over fifty articles and book chapters. He is the co-author of two intellectual property casebooks: Intellectual Property: Private Rights, The Public Interest, and the Regulation of Creative Activity (Thomson West 2007) and Intellectual Property in Business Organizations (Lexis-Nexis 2006). He is a graduate of Amherst College, Stanford Law School, and the University of Michigan, where he earned a Ph.D. in Economics.
Saby Ghoshray, independent scholar. With over a decade of corporate experience with investment banks and fortune 100 corporations, Ghoshray founded the Institute of Interdisciplinary Studies to foster and disseminate advanced legal scholarship premised on multidisciplinary approach. He is the author of numerous law review articles and book chapters including Charting the Future of Online Dispute Resolution: An Examination of the Constitutional and Jurisdictional Quandary (Toledo Law Review, 2006), and Applying the Curved Constitutional Space for Legal Reasoning in Cyberspace Litigation (Michigan State Journal of International Law, 2007). Ghoshray’s main scholarship searches for equality in the legal process vis-à-vis the prism of gender, class and ethnicity. This is echoed in his work on diverse subsets of international law, comparative constitutionalism, Supreme Court jurisprudence, cyber law and, First Amendment jurisprudence, among others. He studied law at Cornell University where he received an MBA from the Johnson Graduate School of Management, in addition to completing his Ph.D. in Chaos Theory from Florida International University.

Joe Hall, Postdoctoral Research Fellow jointly affiliated with the University of California Berkeley School of Information and the Center for Information Technology Policy at Princeton University. Hall earned his PhD from UC Berkeley. His dissertation examined public policy mechanisms for making computerized voting systems more transparent. He continues to work in that vein, supported by the NSF ACCURATE center. He has also begun to examine gaming devices in an effort to learn from how those machines are regulated, implemented and protected from error and malicious activity. He has been involved with the Samuelson Law, Technology and Public Policy Clinic at the Boalt Hall School of Law and has consulted with the Electronic Frontier Foundation to produce a series of electronic voting machine information sheets.

Jeffrey L. Harrison, Stephen C. O'Connell Chair, University of Florida Levin College of Law. Jeffrey L. Harrison received his M.B.A. and Ph.D. from the University of Florida and his J.D. from the University of North Carolina. He has held teaching positions at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the University of Texas, the University of Houston, and the Sorbonne, Paris. Among the books he has published are Understanding Antitrust and Its Economic Implications (with E. T. Sullivan); Law and Economics in a Nutshell; Law and Economics: Positive, Normative, and Behavioral Perspectives; Law and Economics (with Jules Theeuwes); and Regulation and Deregulation (with Thomas Morgan and Paul Verkuil).

Paul Jones, Director of ibiblio.org and Clinical Associate Professor, School of Journalism and Mass Communication and School of Information and Library Science, University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. Jones was the first manager of SunSITE.unc.edu, one of the first World Wide Web sites in North America. He is the author of "The Web Server Book" (Ventana, 1995), and of numerous articles about topics such as digital libraries and the Open Source movement. His areas of interest include: Electronic news, electronic publishing, collaborative environments and applications, digital libraries, wide area information protocols and applications, virtual communities, virtual reality uses as well as social and legal issues relating to networked information and access including intellectual property, first amendment issues, anonymity and information access. Jones is an actively publishing poet.
Anne Klinefelter, Associate Professor of Law and Director of the Law Library, University of North Carolina School of Law. Klinefelter’s research interests include privacy law, the First Amendment, copyright law, and licensing, particularly as these areas apply to libraries. She serves on the Advisory Board of the UNC Center for Media Law and Policy. Prior to coming to UNC, she served as Acting Director of the Law Library at the University of Miami and also held positions in the law libraries at Boston University and the University of Alabama. She is currently Chair of the American Association of Law Schools Section on Law Libraries and past president of the Southeastern Chapter of the American Association of Law Libraries. She also chaired the Copyright Committee of the American Association of Law Libraries. She holds a B.A., a Masters in Library Service, and a J.D. from the University of Alabama.

Mary L. Lyndon, Professor of Law, St. John’s University School of Law. Lyndon holds a J.S.D. from Columbia University, a J.D. from Northeastern University, and a B.A. from Manhattanville College. Her areas of interest include science and the law, including the effects of regulation on the availability of health, safety and environmental information, and the law’s effects on technical change and innovation. She teaches Environmental Law, International Environmental Law, and Torts. Lyndon practiced law from 1974 until 1985, becoming an Assistant Attorney General for the State of New York in 1979. In that capacity she headed a group of attorneys working on acid rain and other environmental problems. She litigated at all levels of the state and federal courts, and presented testimony before state and federal legislative committees on behalf of New York and the National Association of Attorneys General. In 1985-86 she was the Silver Fellow in Law, Science and Technology at Columbia University. Lyndon’s work has appeared in numerous law journals, including the Michigan Law Review, the University of Colorado Law Review, the Yale Journal on Regulation, the New Mexico Law Review, and the Columbia Journal of Environmental Law. She has contributed to several books and has authored legislative reports. Lyndon is a member of the Center for Progressive Reform.

Jasmine McNealy, Assistant Professor of Communications, S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications, Syracuse University. McNealy earned a bachelor’s degree in journalism and Afro-American Studies at the University of Wisconsin and master’s and doctoral degrees in mass communications, as well as a juris doctorate, at the University of Florida. Her research focuses on communications law and related issues. She served previously an assistant professor in the Manship School of Mass Communication at Louisiana State University and an adjunct in the Paul M. Herbert Law Center. She has served also as a lecturer at the University of Florida and a copy/design editor with The Gainesville Guardian. She was honored as an Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication (AEJMC) Scholar for 2009-10.

MODERATORS:

Eric Fink, Jennings Professor of Law and Emerging Scholar, Elon University School of Law. Fink teaches in the areas of civil procedure, administrative law, law & social research, employment law, and professional responsibility. His research examines legal problems, institutions, and practices from a sociological perspective; his current projects include studies of legal consciousness and dispute resolution in the "Second Life" virtual world, law student participation in online social networks, and the formal and informal regulation of recreational fishing. Before joining the Elon faculty, Fink taught legal writing at Stanford Law School, and practiced law in San Francisco and Philadelphia. He has also taught at St. Joseph’s University, University of Chicago and The Anglo-American College in the Czech Republic. He has a bachelor’s degree from The Johns Hopkins University, a master’s degree in sociology from the London School of Economics, and a law degree from New York University School of Law.

Scott Gaylord, Associate Professor of Law, Elon University School of Law. Gaylord practiced with the Charlotte, N.C. firm of Robinson, Bradshaw & Hinson before joining Elon Law. During seven years with the firm, Gaylord handled complex civil and commercial litigation involving breach of contract, unfair trade practice, bankruptcy and appellate work in both state and federal courts. He served as a law clerk to Judge Edith Jones on the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in Houston from 1999 to 2000, working on a wide range of legal issues, including various constitutional amendments and the Bankruptcy Code. Gaylord began his teaching career in 1990 as a teaching fellow at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He has served as a teaching assistant and research assistant at University of Notre Dame Law School and as assistant professor at Ave Maria School of Law. Gaylord received a bachelor’s degree from Colgate University, and master’s and doctoral degrees in philosophy from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He is a graduate of Notre Dame Law School.

David Levine, Assistant Professor of Law, Elon University School of Law, and non-resident fellow at the Center for Internet and Society at Stanford Law School. His scholarship focuses on the operation of intellectual property law at the intersection of technology and public life and intellectual property law’s impact on public and private transparency and accountability. Levine founded and hosts Hearsay Culture on KZSU-FM (Stanford University), a technology and intellectual property law radio show and podcast that was chosen as one of the top five podcasts in the American Bar Association's Blawg 100 of 2008. Prior to becoming a law professor, Levine was a resident fellow at CIS. He also practiced intellectual property, entertainment, labor/employment and commercial litigation as an associate in the Manhattan offices of Pryor Cashman LLP and Windels Marx Lane & Mittendorf LLP and as Assistant Corporation Counsel for the City of New York. He holds a bachelor of science degree in industrial and labor relations from Cornell University and a juris doctor degree from Case Western Reserve University School of Law.