BUILDING UPON A

HISTORY OF SERVICE

1994: With the arrival of new Duke President Nan Keohane, the university begins a process to focus its community engagement efforts by developing partnerships with the 12 neighborhoods surrounding campus and the public schools serving them.

1994: Duke begins its ongoing partnership with Self-Help, with a $2 million loan to build and sell affordable homes in Walltown.

1996: The Duke-Durham Neighborhood Partnership is established.

1997: The America Reads/Counts program launches out of the Community Service Center.

2000: The Southwest Central Durham Quality of Life Project is formed.

2002: Project HOPE offers afterschool support to youth at community-based sites.

2003: The Lyon Park Clinic opens to provide accessible quality healthcare to all Durham residents, regardless of ability to pay.

2004: Duke doubles its loan commitment to Self-Help, bringing the total value of the loan to $4 million.

2006: Duke's Board of Trustees approves the university's new strategic plan, "Making a Difference."

2008: The Office of Durham and Regional Affairs, and the position of Vice President of Durham and Regional Affairs, were created to strengthen and highlight Duke's role as a partner and advocate in Durham and the region.
