School of Communications
Student Application for Diversity & Inclusion Conferences

The School of Communications is committed to providing financial support and opportunities for students with diverse backgrounds. One such avenue for support is attending national conferences that allow students to network and learn from minority professionals who are engaged in meaningful work related to communication and sport.

The school offers limited funds to support students from diverse backgrounds to attend an affinity conference related to a school-related discipline. For a partial list of affinity organizations the School will support, please see the reverse side of this form. Students wishing to apply for a conference not listed must document how that conference relates to some facet of diversity and supports their academic goals.

To augment the student experience, each applicant must retain a faculty mentor who can affirm the conference is related to or organized by an affinity group and supports the applicant’s goals.

Submit a TYPED/PRINTED application no later than three weeks prior to travel departure date to:
